

The author states that besides specific courses of each field of study, every student needs to take some extra courses as liberal studies. Basically in the new era of human life, it is not supposed that humankind's life has on one dimension, thus they should be prepared for multi-dimension of life (e.g. Job career and professionalism, family life and community and social relations). Because of multi-task role of each person during his or her life, I think that proposing some different courses outside one's field of study could improve his or her knowledge and skills toward the life.
